Sneak Peek

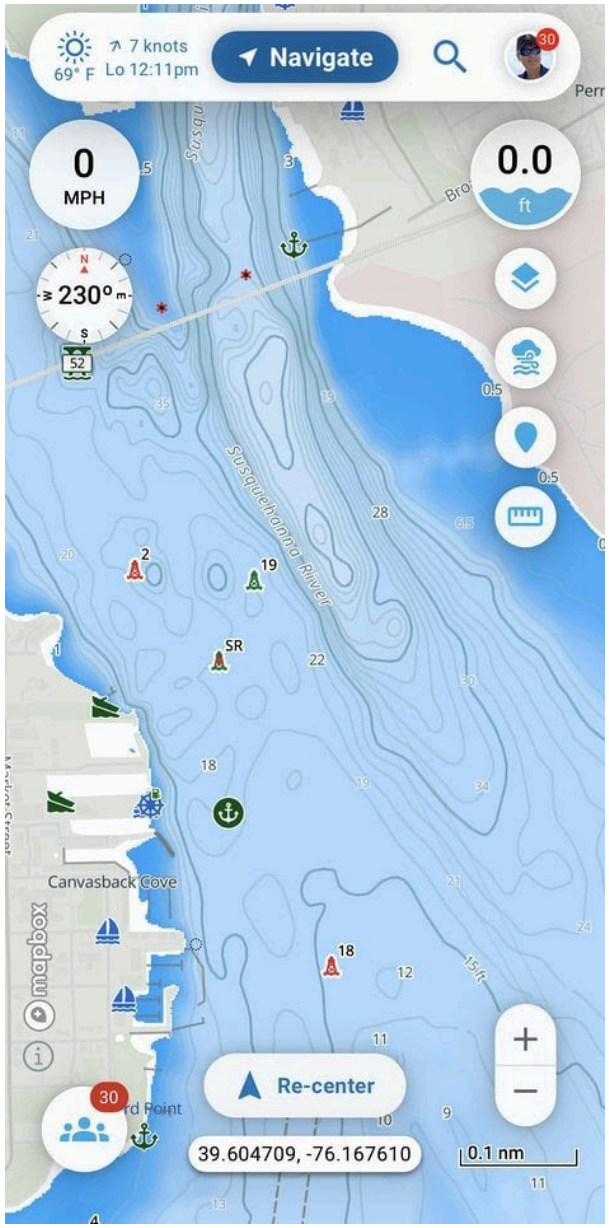
Argo 4.0 Is Almost Here

Argo 4.0 has a new look, with menus and settings that are easier to find your way around.

If you run the ICW or inland rivers, you'll be able to lay U.S. Army Corps of Engineers depth surveys on top of any chart view. No more flipping back and forth.

We're also building brand-new base charts. They will provide greater bathymetric detail and fill gaps in NOAA's coverage, particularly along shorelines.

You'll be able to beta test them in 4.0, and your current charts stay right where they are while we finish.



On the Blog

The Top 10 Boating Destinations in Florida, According to Argo Boaters

On a summer Saturday at the Boca Grande sandbar, boats anchor almost rail to rail. There's no bathroom, no shade, and no restaurant. It still got more Argo trips than anywhere else in Florida.

Florida boaters picked the water itself: sandbars, springs, a reef, and islands you can only reach by boat. Here are the 10 spots they visited most this season, from the Keys to the Georgia line.

What's New this Week

Add Route Points With a Long Press

If you've ever tapped a marina to check it out and added a route point by mistake, this one's for you.

Now you can long-press anywhere on the water, or on any icon on the map, to add it to your route. In Route Settings, choose Tap/Click, Long Press, or Both.

Happy Halloween From the Argo Crew

The Argo crew traded the helm for costumes this year.

Hope you had a good one too.

Next Argo Live

Thursday, November 12th at 8 PM ET

This month's live is a fishing episode. Our special guest, Austin Emerson, is the mate on the Bob Harvey Fishing YouTube channel and uses Argo on the water.

He will join Captain Jeff, Nick Gaffney, founder of SpotOn Fishing, and Argo strategic advisor Dave Rowe.

Bring your fishing questions. We'll also share a quick look at what's coming in Argo 4.0.
