What's New this Week

Live Tide and Current Data

Tide predictions are a great starting point, but actual water levels can differ significantly from predictions as wind and atmospheric pressure change conditions. Currents can also vary with local conditions.

Some stations in Argo now display observed water levels and current speeds from real-time monitoring, right on your chart. These live readings complement predictions with observations of recent conditions at the station.

Look for a blue dot in the upper-right corner of a station icon. That marks a live station. Tap it to see the LIVE reading at the top of your screen.

Want to find the live stations near you? In Search, choose “Tide & Current (Live)” under Navigation Aids.

Next time you’re timing a tricky inlet or a low bridge, check the nearby live stations first.

What’s Really Going On in the Bermuda Triangle

Ships and planes vanishing without a trace. It’s the perfect Halloween story.

But the real answer has more to do with the Gulf Stream, fast-changing weather, and human error. Here’s what that means if you’re crossing to the Bahamas.

Quick Tip

See Only Your Group on the Map

Out with your club or a group of friends and the map's full of boaters you don't know?

Tap Menu, then Map Options, then Boaters. Turn on just the groups you want under Filter by Group, or the marinas and clubs under Filter by Affiliation. Now your map shows only those boaters.

Boaters in the same group as you get a green badge on their map profile icon. Boaters with the same affiliation as you get a green border.

Marina Spotlight

White Rocks Marina, Pasadena, MD

White Rocks is a family-owned marina on Rock Creek, just off the Patapsco River between Baltimore and Annapolis. They just claimed their listing in Argo, so the boaters looking them up now see info straight from the marina.

For boaters: 12 to 15 feet close to shore, about 350 slips, transient space, a fuel dock, a 35-ton lift, and Mike's Crabhouse on site.

Run a marina? Claim your listing so the boaters already looking you up see current info.

Is your marina missing? Forward this to them.
